Academic Program Overview

Already completed the Summer Springboard Psychology and Neuroscience course? Curious about a potential career path as an Experimental psychologist? Discover more about the father of experimental psychology, Wundt, and his first experiment where he tried to assess the speed of thought by measuring how long it took test subjects to make a judgment. Gain exposure to testing theories of human thoughts, feelings, actions, and any aspect that involves the mind. Guided by mentors and instructors drawn from professional fields students learn to study and observe human behavior, how the brain and mind interact, data analysis, research presentation and other skills.
